Graduate School of Asian and African Area Studies, Kyoto University

Doctoral Program [5-year, Non-divided]

Admission Guidelines for Third Year Transfer Students

◆Admission Policy◆

The educational goal of ASAFAS (Graduate School of Asian and African Area Studies) is to foster pioneering area studies researchers and practitioners equipped with a deep understanding of Asian and African areas and a global and interdisciplinary perspective. In accordance with this goal, applicants for admission to ASAFAS are expected to demonstrate: 1) comprehensive fundamental academic abilities and global perspectives; 2) strong intellectual interest in the natural environments and societies of Asian and African areas; 3) the flexible thinking and language proficiencies required to undertake fieldwork; 4) the ability to identify and address research problems as well as the ability to think logically; and 5) the qualities needed to develop the communicative abilities, ethical standards, and sense of responsibility demanded for researchers and practitioners. With the view that exchanges among students from diverse backgrounds cultivate rich human character and broaden the perspectives of research, we also welcome applicants who have worked and/or experienced volunteer activities in Asian and African areas. With a view toward increasing our contributions to the global community, as well as toward strengthening academic exchange with Asian and African areas, we actively accept international students as well.

Students entering ASAFAS are expected to have foundational knowledge in their respective fields of specialization and an understanding of the natural and social characteristics of Asian and African areas, as these provide the starting points for international and interdisciplinary area studies. Proficiency in the English language is also essential for comprehending prior academic literature, presenting research findings, and engaging in international joint research. In order to confirm that applicants possess these fundamental academic abilities, we conduct academic assessments comprising a written examination (specialist subject and English) at the first stage, and an oral examination at the second stage, then make a comprehensive judgment on whether or not to admit each applicant. In the oral examination, we refer to materials such as applicants' university (undergraduate) academic transcripts and application form (reasons for applying and research proposal) to assess their aptitude for area studies.
